This Week's Travel Log

Our learning targets for the week are:

- I can use dominoes, tally marks, base-10 blocks, etc. to give equivalent names for numbers.
- I can write number sentences to express equivalencies.
- I can use subtraction fact strategies to find differences.
- I can write addition and subtraction number models using +, -, and =.
- I can generate fact families.
- I can read and write words containing "the triplet" bossy r vowels: ir as in bird; er as in her; and ur as in fur.
- I can create pictures in my mind as I read in order to visualize what is happening in the story. I can then remember more of what I read.
- I can use context clues or the words, phrases, and sentences surrounding an unfamiliar word as clues or hints to its meaning.
- I can write a story that is 3-5 sentences long about an experience I have had.
- I can take care of my bones, muscles, and teeth in order to keep myself safe and healthy.
